Feedback

This page looks nice as it is intuitive and simple. However, there is a lot of empty space on the sides.

Comments

We will possibly add images or filler to take up the empty space.

Feedback

This page is quite clean and intuitive, similar to the last one. Like the previous page, it has a lot of white space.

The registration page seems to be missing a lot of key fields, such as first name, last name, and postcode, which are in the database schema.

Furthermore, the LOGO HERE does not look nice.

Comments

As this was just a simple mock-up, these extra fields were not included to reduce clutter. In the final submission, these will be included and will look similar to the current fields.

We have not designed the logo yet and we did not finalise the name of the organisation when the mock-up was created. Hence, a placeholder was used.

Feedback

This page looks good as there is clear structure to it. Headings make it easy to identify different sections. The use of images is also good to keep the page interesting for users. The colours used are also appealing.

The buttons seem to be somewhat awkwardly placed which is causing a lot of waste of space. The capitalisation of words also seems inconsistent.

Is the register now button present when the user is logged in?

There is a lot of information on the homepage, such as date posted and branch for the news articles.

The news articles on the homepage could also be placed in their own grey container to make them more distinctive.

Comments

The “See all news” buttons will be moved opposite the news heading to minimise white space. The “Register Now” button will also be moved to a different location. It can possibly be placed opposite the “How you can help” heading.

We will aim to make buttons more consistent in capitalisation in the final submission.

This was overlooked during the mock-up stage. The register now button will indeed be hidden when the user is logged in.

We may hide certain details in the final product which are necessary, such as the branch on the news stories.

The news articles being in their own coloured div seems like a good idea. However, another shade of white will need to be found for the selected colour.

Branches Page

The buttons do not look consistent. For example, different pages have different buttons and within pages, the buttons do not match. For example, the “phone” and “email” buttons do not match the “join branch” buttons.

The opening hours and locations are stacked in a list. Whereas, in other pages they are listed in a vertical manner.

Furthermore, the red highlighted navigation items blend in too much with the red navigation bar. The grey container which holds the branch details also blends in with the background too much. The black text also is hard to read against the grey background. This may cause accessibility issues for vision-impaired users. We also think that the navigation bar items should be highlighted only when they are hovered on.

A search function could be possibly added like on the other pages.

Comments

These were mostly done by accident, as different members worked on different sections. However, these inconsistencies also demonstrate alternative designs which our team will consider. We will make these consistent in the final version.

The grey-on-grey container will most likely be changed. We will also add functionality so that feedback is given if a navigation item is hovered on.

We have left out a search function as this will be small organization with a small number of branches. However, we may add a search function in the future.

Feedback

The back button is inconsistent with the other pages. However, this one seems a bit better as it is a physical button rather than just anchored text. Its placement is a little awkward through. Maybe it could be added on top of the title, to minimise kinematic load?

Again, the opening hours and location details are stacked rather than aligned in the other pages.

The upcoming events implementation seems like a good idea. It is short and entices users to check out other events. Images are also used well on this page. However, maybe more images or a dynamically changing gallery should be added. This is because one static image seems uninteresting.

The phone and email buttons should also be moved higher. This is as for a long slab of text, the user may need to scroll quite far down to find these buttons. Furthermore, would it be worth trying to have these as details under the title rather than buttons?

The images in the upcoming events section might be a little small.

Comments

We will make the back buttons and other elements more consistent. The given idea for the back button seems sensible.

We will consider the rest of these given suggestions.

Feedback

The grey search button and white text may be blending in too much. Furthermore, the search button might be blending with the background too much.

The buttons spanning over two lines does not look good. Maybe the buttons can be made longer so the text fits on one line?

Comments

The search button might be changed to a colour that has more contrast given the feedback. Furthermore, the button will be made wider.

Summary of Findings

The other group stated that the website was quite engaging and intuitive to use as it contained features common in many other sites, such as a search functionality and navigation bar at the top. They also stated that the inclusion of images and use of contrasting colours was good and kept them engaged with the page, especially the homepage which they found to be quite welcoming and friendly. They also mentioned that the use of contrasting elements and text allowed the page to have a high level of accessibility for a variety of users.

Summary of Improvements

The following improvements were commonly stated in the feedback:

- The pages have a lot of white or empty space which make the pages less interesting.
- The colouring and elements within pages, such as the colours of containers and buttons, are not consistent across the website.
- There is not enough contrast in some places, leading to minimised accessibility for users.
- The kinematic load of the pages can be further improved by repositing elements, such as buttons. This will allow users to exert less effort while using the website.
- The registration page also needs to have more data fields to be consistent with the schema.

Most of these issues are due to different people creating different sections These issues will subsequently be addressed before the final submission.
